

Artek Tokyo store

When designing the space in the Artek Tokyo store, Japanese architecture office Daikei Mills sought to achieve a cultural translation of Artek and Alvar Aalto heritage into the Tokyo landscape. The organic shapes and natural materials that characterize Aalto's designs are reflected in the interior architecture. That is why the architects chose Marmoleum flooring, which is made of natural raw materials.

Project name	Artek Tokyo store
Location	Tokyo, Japan
Architect	Daikei Mills
Photographer	Petri Artturi Asikainen

Used Products

XX Marmoleum
Walton
Berlin red

