

Loxton Lutheran School

The Loxton Lutheran School recently opened their newly designed classrooms, intricately designed by Hodgkison Architecture collaborated closely with the school to capture the essence of the local area and culture. To aid this, Forbo's Eternal custom HD digitally printed floor was chosen to make a unique statement with its design of the Murray River and the creatures that inhabit the area. Not only does Eternal help bring ideas and visuals to life, but it is also extremely durable, has an easy-to-clean PUR surface finish, and is low in emissions, complying with best practice PVC sustainable standards in the built environment. The central space also features a stylised version of the town's "Tree of Knowledge" – a majestic River Red Gum, that pays tribute to the Murray River's history and cycles, creating an inviting learning atmosphere and serving as an inspiring source of knowledge.

Location	South Australia
Photographer	RossCo Photography
Interior architect	Hodgkison

Used Products

Eternal Material
quartz stone

