

Peaks and Plains

Taking a holistic approach to the refurbishment of Peaks & Plains Housing Trust's head office, BAND Architects specified an array of products from Forbo Flooring Systems' wide portfolio, including its new homogeneous vinyl, Sphera Element, and popular Tessera carpet tiles. The result is a collaborative, creative and relaxed space, which will improve the morale and productivity of the Trust's employees.

Interior architect BAND Architects

Following the purchase of the building that Peaks & Plains Housing Trust had previously rented space within, the Trust wanted to breathe a new lease of life into the environment to positively impact its employees.

David Wilcock, Director of BAND Architects, was tasked with the challenge and commented "The new office design consisted of various working, meeting, break out and kitchen zones, which were all connected, yet distinguished through the specification of different floor coverings of various materials and shades. For the main working and office space we chose Forbo's new homogeneous vinyl, Sphera Element in the Fog colourway, because of its durable properties and its clean, non-directional aesthetics, which provided a seamless appearance. Tessera Inline carpet tiles in the Onyx shade were interspersed throughout, to create a path around the space to aid wayfinding. As this has a directional aesthetic, we had it installed in the direction in which the employees are intended to walk, dictating the route."
