

Victim Support The Netherlands

Nice match from Flotex and Eternal in the new head office of Victim Support The Netherlands. Victim Support The Netherlands helps 200,000 victims and relatives to resume their lives after a dramatic incident. This means that employees sometimes have serious, confidential conversations with the victims of crime, traffic accidents and calamities. They must be able to do this in a quiet, private atmosphere. Frank Bosman, Facility and Housing Project Leader, set a number of requirements for the floor: it must be strong, have no welds and the production of the floor covering must minimize environmental impact, be recyclable, easy to lay but also good to clean and last a long time. For Liesbeth Rabbinge, interior designer of this project, acoustics, warmth and comfort were important starting points in the floor choice. Together with architect Ward Boeijenjong, she is responsible for the overall interior design. Ward finds the transition between floors and walls the most beautiful in this office. The natural appearance of the wooden frames with the very light colors of the floors and ceilings provides a very pleasant working environment.
