Warning About Fake Blizzard Heating Presses

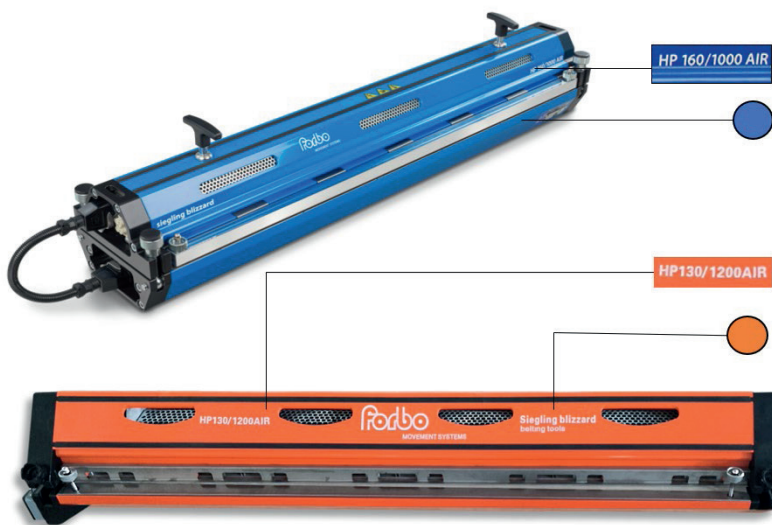

Recently, fake Blizzard heating presses have been repeatedly appearing on the market worldwide. It's mostly Chinese companies that are offering them. They claim to be official partners and suppliers of Blizzard heating presses.

This is incorrect. We are not collaborating with these companies.

Fake products are more than just a nuisance for the customer, they also harm the Forbo brand and the whole industry. Pirate products usually guarantee neither high product quality nor the safety required of Blizzard heating presses. What's more, it's impossible to ensure that all statutory requirements have been met. Fake products can be confiscated by the authorities and incur fines. In the worst-case scenario, using fake presses could cause injury to people and damage to property. Users bear sole liability for any damage caused by fake products. We do not, of course, provide any services or warranty for fake products, and there is no statutory guarantee for them either.

If you have purchased a pirated product, you should ask the vendor to refund the purchase price. A fake product only claims to be made by or on behalf of Forbo. If you buy it, you are not obtaining the quality Forbo is known for.

The pirated heating presses currently circulating are easy to distinguish from the originals, as you can see on the following photos.

The original:

Heating platen width: 160 mm
Color: blue

The fake product:

Heating platen width: 130 mm
Color: orange

Should you have serious doubts about whether the product you've bought is genuine, please contact your local Forbo Siegling company.

Only buy your Blizzard splicing devices via Forbo Siegling sales reps or their official and certified sales partners.
